Tiny Craft No Bigger Than Modern Tugs Built in Spain for World's Fair.

CHICAGO, Aug. 30 .- Resplendent in new coats of paint and thoroughly over-hauled the Christopher Columbus three caravels which were made for the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893 will sail to-morrow bound for another journey to The replicas of the discoverer's three ships are headed for the Panama Canal, with the ultimate destination of the San Francisco-Panama Exposition.

The great lakes, the Atlantic and Pacific oceans and the new Panama Canal, will be traversed by the craft before they finally come to anchor. From the South Chicago ship yards, where the boats are being overhauled, they will go to Milwaukee and Green Bay, thence to the head of Lake Michigan and through the Strait of Mackinac to Lake Huron, thence to Lakes Erie and Ontario and into the St. Lawrence River to the At-lined boxes of earth, in which charcoal fires may be laid.

The crews have based their preparations for the trip on the experience of a sailor now in Chicago who crossed the Atlantic in the Nina, smallest of the ships. This sailor's crossing was in 1893, when the Santa Maria and its two companions, the Nina and Pinta, were brought from Spain. He is Peter O'Donnell, master at arms, U.S. N. now in charge of the Niagara, Commodore Perry's resurrected flagship. He says of the trip across the Atlantic:

"We were towed across the ocean by American and Spanish warships, but as far as seafaring goes our trip had much of the experience of that one 400 years before. We lived on canned goods and dried meats. We were only twenty days in cressing, a third of the time of Co-lumbus and constant of the time of Co-lumbus and created by the pretensions of President Wilson, or perhaps may record another phase of the conflict which would have transcendental consequences for the entire world, and one word lightly spoken, one prejudiced expression, one outtended to object to any further advances of this character by the United Stajes.

One thing is certain at this time: The initiative will have to come from the Mexican Government now if Lind is to return to Mexico city and reopen the new formation of the experience of that one 400 years before. ### Ships Are Very Light.

"The ships are light. I sailed in the Nina. It bobbed about with every wave and had it not been for our hammocks we could not have slept at all.

"I do not know how Columbus's men prepared their food, but we were told by Genose tradition they managed it as we did—with a galley fixed to the mainmast. We had a Japanese cook. Whenever he could keep the galley hitched to the mast and himself hitched to the galley we had something to eat that was warm. It was a pleasant experience ex-

The Pints and Nina are caravels, which was a smaller type of vessel built for speed.

Still eight knots an hour was all caravels rould do in those days, and the speed of the Nina and Pints is a trifle less. In general euitine the three vessels are not unlike huge helmets with extended visors set in the water upside down.

The Santa Maria is the heaviest rigged of the three, and when New Yorkers see her they will wonder how she can stay upright in the smallest puff of wind. The secret of this is her builging sides, she is narrower across the deck than at the water line, and it is still wider a few feet below the water. The rail of the Santa Maria at the centre is 18 feet above the water line. In the bow there is a raised deck three feet higher. A still higher deck lies aft, which is 26 feet 10 inches above the water line. The Pints is of 50 tons and the Nina 40 tons.

The buy weather the vessels are dangerously topheavy, but with the sails furled to bulge below the waterline saves them the stern are seen in the sails furled to the stern are seen in the sails furled to the stern are seen in the seed of the santa which was simple to day that he was now definitely a candidate for the office of President

The Inited States, with an appropriation of 15,000 made before the Chicago fair, built the Pinta and the Nina in Barcelona, Spain. They were regularly commissioned as vessels of the United States navy and left adiz under the command of Lieut. William McLittle on February 18, 1803.

The cruiser Newark towed one and the yunboat Bennington towed the other. At yunboat Bennington towed the other. At adiz they joined the Santa Maria, started best, cruised through the Canary Islands and came to Havana. They then esiled the Chicago.

From the Pacific engrowing as to whether such an invitation to the canal they will be sailed will be extended. The tone of unofficial expressions by Gamboa and Huerta indicates that they are not contemplating any auch move at present.

Some day well along in the fall New York harbor is to again see the Columbus caravals which were in port for a few weeks in 1893 on their way to Chicago The vessels are dumpy, square rigged, high decked in front with even higher decks aft and look more like Flying Dutchmen which do not fly than anything else.

The three strange vessels are not much larger than the tugs which handle the huge ocean liners of to-day.

Small and odd looking as these three vessels are, three exactly like them performed the greatest voyage of discovery in history. They made the first trip across the Atlantic under the command of Columbus when he discovered America.

These modern vessels, built on the same rlars as the three used by Columbus, were built in Spain for exhibition at the Chicago world's fair in 1893.

They will be shown at the Panamagerife Exposition, which will celebrate the opening of the Panama Canal in 1915.

The Santa Maria, considered a fairly large vessel in her day, is not much larger than war, considered a fairly large vessel in her day, is not much larger than a summer cruising yacht. She is of 100 tons, 74 feet 2 inches long and 25 feet 7 inches broad at the waterline. She was tolumbus's flagship was called a "nao," or vessel.
